KMaya knowledge engagement programs (2007 – 2014) had resulted in library professionals sharing their experiences on topics that are related to the profession. In 2012 Knowledge Connections had developed KMaya, an online knowledge sharing portal to ‘capture these experiences’ via online social networking tools. Our forays in knowledge sharing had resulted in creating a channel for online learning and a platform in building the library knowledge networks.

Highlights:

- ❖ KMaya Participation in two international seminars – A_LEIPH (Thailand) and IFLA (Singapore) in 2013.
- ❖ Building the Cataloguing domain with more than 100 Cataloguing practitioners sharing their experiences in multiple brainstorming labs (Feb 2013 – Oct 2014).
- ❖ Developing insights for a new domain in library promotion - the next CoP September workshop hosted by the Sabah State Library.
- ❖ Establishment of the ‘KMaya Way’ which is the knowledge sharing model being implemented in the public sector communities.

Topic of discussion:

“Developing library professionals: The influence of communities of practice” highlighting The KMaya Way of:

- *Engaging with peers and like-minded professionals to resolve issues;
- *Developing competencies beyond the four walls;
- *Gaining professional recognition and reputation through proactive contributions;
- *Building trust and establish ‘modes of belonging’ to a common subject; and
- *Translating knowledge, experiences and insights into shared practices and build the knowledge base.
